

Clark's Nursery

Brief:

A regional landscape firm needed to update its offices and client meeting areas and unify all of the existing building's exteriors.

Strategy:

The office and client meeting areas were opened up with exposed wood trusses at 10' o.c. and increased the volume of the small space to create a warm, welcoming area. New entries and dormers were added and by using clean, simple materials, the owner used his own workers during the winter to complete most of the work before the spring construction season started.
